CONFERENCE THEME: 'Actors for Social Justice in Education'

Issues related to diversity and education, dropping out of education, social exclusion and inclusion of young people, marginalization and belonging are focal questions in all of the Nordic countries as well as globally. Marginalization and exclusion from active participation and success in education are detrimental both for the individual and society at large. Schools, other educational institutions as well as various actors within and beyond these institutions have a significant role in the processes of exclusion and inclusion. This pre-conference focuses on factors that constrain or serve to further justice in education. The focus is on the actors and their agency, negotiations, transgressions and practices of resistance at the policy, society, school, and classroom levels. The pre-conference invites you to study such responses to marginalization or exclusion and inclusion, and the conditions for different actors in education to work towards social justice.

KEYNOTE, Professor Heidi Safia Mirza

Respecting Difference: Towards a critical pedagogy for social justice educators in post-race times

"In my lecture I will draw on black feminist and critical race perspectives to explore the ways in which professional educators can engage in 'embodied' work that enables them to begin the process of 'decolonising' their places of teaching and learning. In the context of the significant numbers of Muslim, Black and Asian students who are now entering European education systems, I unpack the ways in which 'just being there' can create unsettling spaces of contestation in our still overwhelmingly white institutions. Drawing on my research on the pedagogic practices of teacher educators and their dilemmas of teaching race, faith and culture, I explore the difficult concept of 'spaces of safety' which offers us the radical possibility of transcending the 'stuck' institutional discourses of 'diversity' and racial equality which dominates our educational landscapes in so called 'post-race times'."

Biography: Heidi Safia Mirza is Professor of Race, Faith and Culture at Goldsmiths College, University of London. Her work focuses on ethnicity, race, gender, faith, culture and identity in education. She has widely researched educational inequalities, including minority students' experiences in schools and processes of racialisation in higher education. Professor Mirza has contributed significantly to the research on equality and human rights issues for Muslim, Black and minority communities. Her recent work explores current debates on multiculturalism and diversity, as well as cultural and religious difference, Islamophobia and gendered violence.

PANEL DISCUSSION

Are the Nordic systems of education providing a fair and equal education for all students?

Panellists: Director General Anna Ekström, Swedish National Agency for Education; Director General Aulis Pitkälä, Finnish National Board of Education; and Professor John Benedicto Krejsler, Aarhus University, Denmark.

The panellists will discuss what they think makes the school system in their respective country socially just. Furthermore, the panellists will treat questions such as: What are the most important inequalities with regard to gender, social class, race, ethnicity, religion, sexuality, (dis)ability and language in the Nordic schools, and what are the Nordic countries doing to alleviate these inequalities?

University Lecturer Fritjof Sahlström, University of Helsinki, will moderate the panel discussion. Professor Joron Pihl from the Oslo and Akershus University College and Professor Hannu Simola from the University of Helsinki, will act as discussants.

The panel discussion is organized in collaboration with the Finnish Ministry of Education and Culture.
